John Lord (POW)

On the outbreak of war in 1939, John joined the RAF and was posted to a base in Scotland. As an observer, he flew missions on bombing raids over Germany. On one such mission in 1941 his plane came down, he was captured and taken prisoner of war.

Although a prisoner the family hoped, he would be relatively safe. Letters were exchanged and parcels sent via the Red Cross. The family even had a photograph sent from a POW camp that shows him looking well.

In April 1945, the family learned of the relief of the prison camp at which he had been interned and were awaiting news of his homecoming. Instead, they learned that he had died of wounds during a long march from one camp to another. While on the march, the prisoners were mistaken for enemy troops and were attacked by allied bombers, John and a number of his comrades receiving wounds. Some of the prisoners had been forced marched from camps in Poland to Germany in front of the advancing Russians.

John was taken to Broizenburg on Elbe. He was badly wounded in the right leg on the 19th of April and the German Surgeon was compelled to amputate. In addition, he had a deep wound in the left side of his back in which he developed gangrene, on the 22nd April he was operated on at 11 am, but in spite of all the Doctors could do, he died at 2 pm the same afternoon. His funeral took place the following day at 8 am with six of his comrades present.

Boizenburg on Elbe. John was very badly wounded in the right leg on the 19th of April and the German surgeon was compelled to amputate. In addition he had a deep wound in the left side of his back in which he developed gangrene on the 22nd. Ref. No. P.362614/45/2140an(a) 3-

The Under Secretary of State for Air presents his compliments to

Mr. E. Lord and begs to forward herewith photograph of cross marking the grave of No. 955266 ... Parant Officer,

John Lord (full name).

These have been received from the Army Graves Service, who are responsible for the temporary marking of war graves.

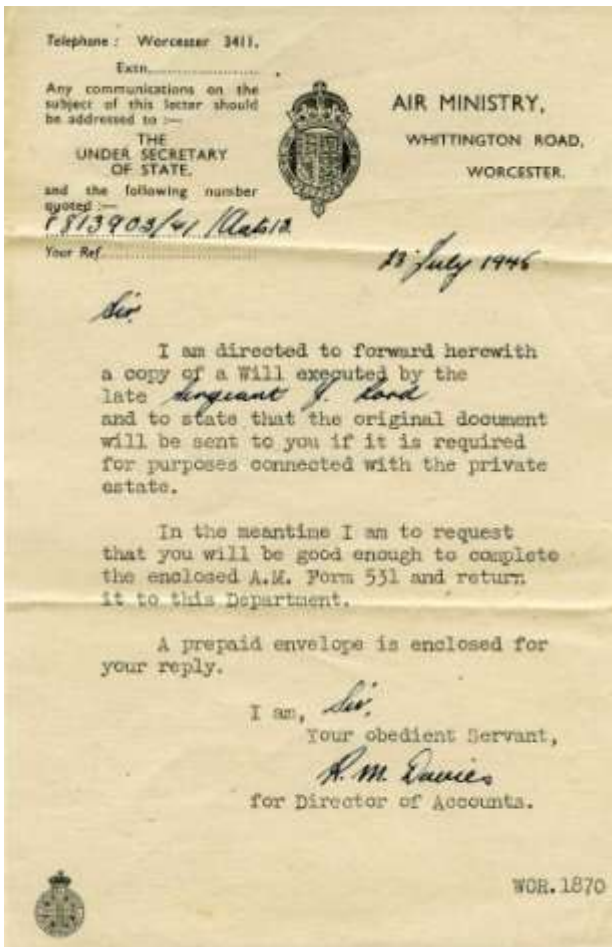

Temporary crosses will be replaced in due course by permanent headstones to be erected by the Imperial War Graves Commission. Details of the inscription on the temporary cross will be carefully checked at that stage and any errors rectified before the permanent headstone is erected.
